HURRICANE AT YORK SPRINGS

Buildings Unroofed, Trees Uprooted and Other Damage Done at York Springs when Hurricane Paid Twenty Minute Visit.

With terrific force a cyclone struck York Springs about eleven o'clock Sunday morning and, following a path about a hundred yards wide through the center of the town, unroofed buildings, uprooted trees, rocked houses and did a great amount of damage. A definite path was followed and portions of the town not in the direct line of the storm suffered no damage whatever.

For twenty minutes the wind raged with terrifying velocity and many residents made preparations to leave their homes. Among these were George Deatrick and John Sadler, both of whom reside in substantial brick residences, and who felt the buildings rocking. In front of Mr. Sadler's home a large tree was blown down. A big pine tree was blown down on the front lawn of Anthony Dardorff.

At the Lutheran parsonage a chimney was blown over and four windows were blown in by the force of the wind. J. T. Myers' woodshed was overturned and carried for a distance of twenty feet. At the home of Mrs. S. O. Gardner a window sash with three panes of glass was blown into a room and the awning in front of the house was carried a distance of 150 feet to the Methodist parsonage. A board from the awning was torn loose as it left its fastenings and, swirling around the corner of the house, was planted in a nearby tree.

One of the greatest freaks of the storm was the carrying of a roof 16 x 12 from the chicken house at the home of William Hendricks for a distance of one hundred yards where it struck a large apple tree. The tree caught the roof about the middle and caused it to split in half. The divided roof caught both sides of the tree and stripped off many large limbs. Even after being checked the roof continued some little distance before it finally came to a stop.

The storm was by far the worst that York Springs has had for a number of years and residents, generally, were thoroughly frightened while it lasted. There was no electrical display and the thunder storm which visited Gettysburg and other portions of the county was totally lacking at York Springs.

During the thunder storm of Sunday morning the barn on the farm of Ira Taylor in Menallen township was struck and a valuable mare, belonging to Mervin Knouse, was killed. The mare was valued at $200 while damage estimated at $40 was done to the barn. The bolt was a "cold stroke" and the structure did not take fire.

BADLY INJURED

Mount Joy Township Man Meets with Serious Accident.

Clayton Rohrbaugh, who resides near the Hoffman Orphanage in Mount Joy township, was seriously injured about seven o'clock this morning when he was thrown from a buggy by a colt which he was trying to break in and which had become unruly. He was thrown to the ground in a wheat field and a bad gash was cut on his head. A physician was summoned and examination showed that, while the skull was not fractured, a very ugly injury had been received. Mr. Rohrbaugh remained in an unconscious condition for three hours. He is expected to recover. He is twenty four years of age and unmarried.

FIRST MEETING FOR NEXT YEAR

Spanish American War Veterans Select Gettysburg for 1914 Meeting. Company M. Represented in Offices.

At the meeting of the Fifth Pennsylvania Spanish American War veterans in Altoona last week it was decided to hold the next annual meeting in Gettysburg starting April 27, 1914. This is the first convention for next year that has yet been secured.

Company M, of this regiment, was recruited in Gettysburg and at last week's meeting in Altoona was represented by John D. Keith and James G. McIlhenny. When they arrived at Altoona they found that many of their fellow veterans would like to come to Gettysburg next year and, after a little work and a formal invitation, the attraction was secured. The attendance will be about 400 or 500, it is thought. The meeting consists of a business session, a banquet and sight-seeing trip.

At the business sessions last week James G. McIlhenny was chosen third vice president and Ross Hickock, of Harrisburg, the president. At the time of the war in 1898 Mr. Hickock was first lieutenant of Company M. With his family he visited Gettysburg on Sunday.

TO MOVE BODY

Handsome Memorial Over New Grave of Barbara Fritchie.

The remains of Barbara Fritchie, Whittier's heroine, which since her death have been buried in the old German Reformed Graveyard, Frederick, will in a few days be removed to Mt. Olivet Cemetery along with the bodies of her husband, Casper Fritchie, and several others which will also be transferred.

The plan is to place the ashes of Barbara Fritchie in a vault and reinter them later with appropriate ceremonies. The arrangements will be made by the Barbara Fritchie Memorial Association, which is collecting a fund to erect a handsome memorial over her grave.

Hundreds of tourists from all over the United States come annually to Frederick to visit the grave of Dame Barbara. In recent years the old cemetery has not been kept up, and the grave is now in an isolated and neglected spot.

Several sites in the cemetery have been suggested for the grave, but none has yet been selected. One of the spots is an elevation between the old and new portions of the cemetery.

DR. O'NEAL FUNERAL

Many Beautiful Floral Tributes to Dr. J. W. C. O'Neal.

The funeral of Dr. J. W. C. O'Neal was held at half past ten this morning at his late home on Carlisle street. Dr. T. J. Barkley, his pastor, conducted the services and was assisted by Rev. J. T. Huddle, of Washington, a son-in-law of Dr. O'Neal. The number of handsome floral tributes was unusually large. At one o'clock the body was taken to Hanover for interment on the lot in Mt. Olivet cemetery where Dr. O'Neal's wife and a son were buried some years ago. The honorary pall bearers were Hon. William McClean, Hon. S. McC. Swope, Dr. J. R. Dickson, Dr. P. M. Bickle, Dr. G. D. Stahley, and Hon. William McSherry. The active pall bearers were S. S. Neely, J. Donald Swope, Charles E. Stahle, Prof. Charles H. Huber, J. L. Butt and D. P. McPherson.

PLACE SIGNS ON STATE HIGHWAYS

Fine Metal Posts and Sign Boards Placed along the Pike from Gettysburg to Chambersburg. Foretells State Ownership.

The first precursors of coming state ownership of the Chambersburg & Gettysburg turnpike were observed on Friday when a flying motor truck sped from Chambersburg to Gettysburg distributing and erecting highway signs and markers between the two points. The markers consist of substantial cast-iron pillars showing about eight feet above the earth with an open base of two and a-half feet.

The sign is detachable, the total weight of pillar and sign being about two hundred pounds. At highways crossing the pike a pillar and sign are placed, bearing the line, "State Highway," and a second line, "Gettysburg, Pittsburgh," an arrow pointing eastward for Gettysburg and westward for Pittsburgh. The letters are in white on a black ground. In some instances distances are given, in figures.

Each pillar is set in cement and thus securely fastened against wind or bumps. Where there are sharp or dangerous curves a marker, "Curve," is located at a suitable distance both east and west. Two men do the work directed by a state engineer as to location and distances.

IMPROVEMENTS

Many Business Men Improve Stores for Coming Summer.

The spirit of improvement which has been manifested by many property owners has been caught by some of the business men of town with the result that a number of stores are presenting a greatly improved appearance.

E. S. Faber has removed from his cigar store the benches for his cigar makers and has placed them in another part of the establishment. New cases have been put in the main store room and the old game room renovated.

The stores of Charles Blocher, Dougherty and Hartley, and C. B. Kitzmiller have all been enlarged and improved while the Gettysburg Department Store has greatly changed the appearance of its place of business by the new arrangement of the front with two fine large display windows.

P. W. Stallsmith has installed his new Lippincott soda fountain in his enlarged room which is tastefully furnished. A grill room with Pullman seats and tables will be added on the first floor in a few days. The main room makes a very fine appearance and plans for the grill room are very attractive.

CARRIED WATER ON THIRD DAY

Fayetteville Boy, Eight Years Old Ran away. Took Part in the Battle of Gettysburg, and got Whipping for it.

Among the people who will visit Gettysburg next July, when the men of the North and South meet in their reunion, will be William H. Boggs, the night manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company in Harrisburg. Mr. Boggs is not exactly a veteran of the Civil War, but he was here. He was a boy of eight and ran away from home to see the battle, his service consisting of carrying water to the soldiers on the third day. He got soundly spanked for his service, however, instead of a medal of honor.

Mr. Boggs was born and reared at Fayetteville, the garden spot of the Cumberland Valley, and it is only eighteen miles from the battlefield. When the fight started and lasted over the second day he got away from the parental roof and hiked it part of the way and rode the rest to the battlefield. He arrived on the field on the afternoon of the terrible third day and carried water from Spangler's Spring to soldiers who had driven back the Confederates.

"I spent the whole night carrying water and when the sun of July 4 peeped over the horizon I was all in," says Mr. Boggs. "I did not have any shoes and precious little to eat. Between that and the work of carrying water, I want to tell you I was never so tired in my life. Will I be there on the fiftieth anniversary? Well, I should say I will."

"I will meet an old telegrapher from New York who was in Rickett's battery and from the description I gave him of myself a few months ago over the wire he thinks he will know me after fifty years. Just think, I was eight then and carried water for the men of that command. It was one of the greatest experiences of my life and I will never forget it or the punishment my dear old mother administered with a poplar switch for disobeying her and running away to the battle of Gettysburg."

ADAMS IN 7TH CLASS

Under New Law Adams County is in Next to Last Class.

Senator Catlin has a bill to divide the counties of the state into eight classes. The measure has been introduced. Under its provisions Franklin and Cumberland would be counties of the sixth class. Fulton county would be in the eighth class, Adams and Bedford in the seventh.

The purpose of the classification is to expedite legislation of a more or less local character without limiting by population, which is necessary at the present time. This population limitation in connection with acts of Assembly has frequently been questioned by the Supreme Court. On the other hand judges of the same court have suggested a classification. The Catlin division is made according to population.

SHENANDOAH

By HENRY TYRRELL

Founded on BRONSON HOWARD'S Great Play

A Stirring Story of Military Adventure and of a Strange Wartime Wooing

Copyright, 1912, by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

"Three cheers for the American girl, anyhow!" proposed Hart.

They were given with a will, and Marie Mason, going out with honors, was rejoined by Captain Edward

© by Patriot Publishing company.

"Major Paul Revere, Thirtieth Massachusetts."

Thornton of the Confederate secret service, who had watched the scene with a peculiarly cynical smile.

General Winder, provost marshal of Richmond, in full uniform and accompanied by a staff officer, entered and stood at the head of the rough table.

General Winder then briefly announced the intelligence that a Confederate prisoner having fallen into the hands of the Federal authorities, the latter proposed putting the officers and crew of the ship on parole, threatening them with summary execution.

"Under these circumstances," continued the general, "the Confederate States government has felt constrained to give notice that we will hold an equal number of Union men of corresponding rank, chosen from among the prisoners at present in our hands here in Richmond as hostages, to be dealt with in the same manner as Mr. Lincoln shall decide to deal with those of our compatriots now in his power."

"My requisition calls for six officers out of perhaps four times that number from this division. Are there six among you who, knowing the gravity of the situation, and I do not deceive you as to its importance, are there six among you, I say, who are willing to offer themselves as hostages?"

Every Union man in the room stepped forward, including Ralph Hunt, who arose feebly from his couch.

General Winder was visibly affected at the manifestation, but he pretended to be only perplexed and annoyed.

"What! All of you? But I only asked for six. I see that some definite plan of selection will have to be followed. You shall draw lots."

He took out his notebook, tore some slips of paper from it and directed Captain Warner to pass them around and have each man write his name on one. The slips were then all placed in a hat, from which Captain Cox was unanimously chosen to draw out six names. He did so, one at a time, handing each slip to Captain Warner with out looking at it. Warner read the names aloud, and the general repeated them after him, at the same time writing them down in his notebook. They were as follows:

"Major Paul Revere, Thirtieth Massachusetts."

"Colonel Alfred Wood, Fourteenth New York."

"Lieutenant Frank Bedloe, — Pennsylvania."

"Colonel Michael Corcoran, Sixty-ninth New York."

"Captain Alfred Ely, Thirty-seventh New York."

"Captain Ralph Hunt, Tenth Kentucky."

Instantly upon the completion of this list Captain Cox spoke up and said:

"General, the last name I have drawn by an unhappy fatality is that of my old friend and comrade, Captain Ralph Hunt. He is a sick man and not in condition to go as hostage. With your permission, general, I will go in his place."

While General Winder was deliberating his reply a woman's scream was heard outside the door, and Marie Mason rushed wildly in.

CHAPTER IX. A Bold Escape.

"YOU shall not do it, Tom!" she cried. "It is not to freedom, but to death, they would take you. Don't go, Tom!"

The lots decided it fairly, and your name was not drawn. You shall not!"

Here the silent Confederate officer, Captain Thornton, who had followed closely after her, caught her in his arms as she sank back fainting and, at a sign from the general, carried her, with the assistance of Warner, out of the room. Then, turning to Captain Cox, General Winder said:

"Your proposition is out of order, sir, and I cannot consider it. The six men whose names have been drawn will report at once in the commissary's room."

The general and his staff officers retired, while Captain Warner and the guard took up their positions at either side of the doorway.

Hunt, the sick man, who had been helped by Lieutenant Bedloe to a chair, now got up again and grasped Captain Cox's hand, saying:

"Tom, you are the better man of us two—you have proved it in every way. I'm glad Winder wouldn't take you, as it is far better that I should go. All the same you meant it, old fellow, and it was sublime."

"Why, Ralph," said Cox chokingly, "we are comrades—old comrades. Say no more, but I wish to heaven I could go in your place."

"Attention! Fall in!" commanded Warner.

The six doomed men fell into line, after silently shaking hands with those left behind. Hunt leaning on the arm of young Bedloe, and followed Warner into the outer darkness, for night had fallen and the dismal glare of a couple of lanterns intensified rather than dispelled the surrounding gloom.

Cox paced up and down the forelorn room, with bowed head and hands clasped behind his back, for full fifteen minutes in the awful silence. Then he muttered:

"This is the last blow. Deacon, do you ever despair of what they call Providence?"

"Never did yet," protested the sturdy Hoosier. "I can't and won't believe they are going to sacrifice those boys in cold blood. Such things ain't in the bounds of civilization."

"I don't know. How about war itself? Here you have it, the deadliest kind—brother against brother. I tell you, Hart, we haven't seen the worst yet, though God knows there's enough to make the angels in heaven weep already."

"Well, one thing is certain—these hostages won't be sacrificed unless the Confederate prisoners are executed first, so our side will have the first move anyhow."

"What sort of consolation is that to the fellows who get shot or hung?"

Here another violent commotion interrupted. Marie Mason entered—a lone, disheveled, bright-eyed apparition.

"Oh, Tom!" she gasped breathlessly. "What's your poor child, are you still here?"

Cox exclaimed, this time gathering her unreservingly into his arms. "You must leave this accursed place or you will go mad—if you don't drive us so."

"I've come back to tell you there's more news."

"Of what? Of whom?"

"From Washington—of the Confederate prisoners. General Winder has just received a dispatch."

"Great Jehoshaphat!" ejaculated Hart. "Didn't I tell you so?"

"What does the dispatch say?" asked Cox.

"I don't know, but it is favorable, I am sure—that is, there aren't going to be any executions. I heard the general say that much."

"Here comes the commissary," announced Hart.

"For God's sake, Captain Warner," said Cox, that official reappeared, "don't keep us in this horrible suspense another minute! What's the latest news?"

"There's a woman about—what more do you want?" replied Warner. "She overheard a secret about a minute ago and as a natural result it's all over the place by this time."

"I beg of you, cap, on my benedict knees," pleaded Hart, suiting the action to the word.

"Well," said the commissary captain, very deliberately taking a paper from his pocket, "I suppose you-uns may as well be put out of your misery. Here's a copy of the dispatch General Winder has got from Abe Lincoln. I thought the Washington government would back down."

He handed the paper to Cox, who read eagerly aloud:

President learns from New York trial of Confederate cruiser prisoners resulted in disagreement of jury. Leniency to be shown. Proposed holding of Union hostages in jeopardy at Richmond unnecessary. Question of exchange referred to separate negotiations pending on that subject.

SIMON CAMERON, Secretary of War.

"You see, I was right this time," said Marie triumphantly.

"Hooray! Here come the boys back!" cried Deacon Hart. "What did I say about faith in Providence? This is going to be a blessed Thanksgiving, even if we ain't exchanged yet."

"Oh, Tom, this is your last chance!" whispered Marie as the tramp of approaching footsteps was heard outside. "Last chance for what?" asked Captain Cox, with exasperating stupidity.

"Why, to kiss me."

Such was life, as it wore along in the Libby warehouse prisons. Sometimes, as in the instance just related, the emotions of years were crowded into a single hour. Ordinarily, the heavy days dragged so that each one seemed a weary lifetime. The hope of exchange was ever hope deferred. Plots and plans of escape served to beguile the intolerable ennui of captivity and to bring a passing rush of excitement to war checks—and that was about all. A warm brotherly affection had sprung up between Captain Ralph Hunt, the weak but courageous and somnolent, and Lieutenant Frank Bedloe, the youth of spirit and iron community, who was more or less a mystery to his closest comrades, yet who bore a sort of "daredevil" reputation, even among those who knew him but slightly or not at all. Bedloe fairly burned to be free and fighting again, and he lost sleep straining at the idea of escape. He had been in every forlorn hope of the kind since his arrival and was under special surveillance, perhaps on this account, perhaps at the instance of a certain Confederate secret service officer, Thornton by name.

Other Union prisoners in Libby were allowed occasional visitors and received presents of food and clothing from home. No such remembrances ever reached Lieutenant Bedloe. No letters came to him, nor was he known to write any. It was even uncertain to what state he belonged, and if he had a home, relatives or friends he never made any allusion to them. War was war, not a picnic, he said. Once a soldier, it was "all off" with other ties. His one object was to win military distinction, meaning rapid promotion for conspicuous gallantry.

Precisely the opposite of this fierce and somber obsession was the character of Ralph Hunt—frank, gentle, confiding, childlike in some qualities as well as in some weaknesses. But he loved Bedloe, and his own ambitions, as the tide of a blighted life slowly but surely ebbed merged into one great desire to do something for the strong, noble, dashing comrade who had contributed so much to cheer the gloom of prison existence.

The other came in an odd and unexpected way. Hunt's kind southern friends had the happy thought to replace his dilapidated uniform with a new suit of civilian clothes—clothes of course, and of the good homey material known as "flannel." As a matter of fact, Lee, whose Confederate army, especially after the first year of the war, was supplied with buttermilk of various shades. The "uniforms" were anything but uniform. A gray coat, a gray pair of trousers, or a gray hat, sufficed to mark the followers of Lee and Jackson, and some soldiers went through all the campaigns clad in their home garb as farmers or mountaineers. A supreme service was devised for Ralph Hunt's new suit the very day it arrived.

"You are the man to get away with it, Frank," insisted the owner of the clothes. "The opportunity is wasted on me."

"Ralph is right," declared Captain Cox, "You can make as good use of your liberty as any officer here, Lieutenant Bedloe. No, don't think of me. I have something else in view for my self."

So it came about that one morning when Captain Warner had been replaced by a subordinate named Turner as acting commissary and the guard for the Potomac room had been newly changed, a gawky youth in buttoned boots and mustache slipped off his band and the officer who had perfunctorily counted the prisoners and in a twinkling was mixed up with the free soldiers who lounged about the place on one pretext or another, though he was still on the wrong side of the railing that constituted the dead line. Here Turner was stationed, sitting at a desk just within the pale.

"Hello, cap—do they keep you busy?" drawled the youth in buttoned boots, matching his clothes with the assumed accent of a North Carolina tarheel.

"Who the devil are you?" demanded the official, glancing up from his records, "and what are you doing here?"

"I'm from Noth Ca'liny, and I followed the yard in so's to get a look at them 'ere Yankee prisoners. I'm going to the front tomorrow an' I thought before I went I'd like to see what these Yanks looked like."

"Go to the front and be cursed, and there you'll see more Yanks than you want to. Now, get out of here and stay out."

"All right, cap, you needn't be so snooty about it," retorted the supposed tarheel as he lurched out through the wicket and made for the door, where, rolling a quid of tobacco in his cheek, he winked at the armed guard and passed out.

Here was where Lieutenant Frank Bedloe, daredevil, demonstrated his old self again. Instead of disappearing with all possible celerity, as any man of ordinary nerve would have done, once escaped from Libby prison, he deliberately crossed the street to the vacant lot opposite and stood there a minute or two with his hands in his pockets, gazing up at the barred front windows of the big brick building to see if any of his late comrades in captivity had ventured across the dead line to catch a glimpse of his actual departure for "God's country."

A few pale faces could be dimly discerned within. To these Frank waved a parting salute, murmuring, "Goodbye; I hope we'll meet again somewhere else."

Then he slouched off in the direction of the Rockets, down the bend of the James river.

Husband Says Philadelphia Stole His Family.

Atlanta, Ga., April 28. — Warrants sworn out by an outraged husband, who said he refrained from shooting because of his little children, revealed an astounding marital drama.

The husband, John Addison Barwick, a prominent young Atlanta business man, charges that John D. Mattford, formerly of Philadelphia, and wealthy, eloped with Mrs. Bertha Evelyn Barwick, twenty-three years his junior, and took with him Barwick's two children, Dorothy Elizabeth, aged nine, and John Addison, Jr., five years old, and Mrs. Barwick's mother, Mrs. Annie Laurie Jeter.

Barwick charges that his mother-in-law, dazzled by Mattford's money, urged her daughter to elope and that his wife, children and mother-in-law are with Mattford in Philadelphia, and he will try through Senator Hoke Smith to have the department of justice proceed against Mattford.

"I am done with her now," said Barwick, "and as for Mattford, he's not worth a bullet. What I want is to place him behind bars as one would a marauding animal."

TARIFF DEBATE ENDS TONIGHT

Vigorous Effort to be Made to Amend Bill.

MINORITY TO ATTACK ACT

Republicans and Progressives to Bombard Measure With Amendments. Senate May Give Hearings.

Washington, April 28.—General debate on the Democratic tariff revision bill will end in the house of representatives tonight. The measure will be taken up tomorrow under the five-minute rule and be read, paragraph by paragraph, for amendment, the prospect being that it will pass the house within ten days and go to meet longer consideration in the senate.

Republicans and Progressives, characterized in the debate last week as "the two-pronged fork minority," are planning to bombard the measure with amendments until Leader Underwood, with his overwhelming majority, repulses their attack. With two minority leaders, however, Mann for the Republicans and Murdock for the Progressives, directing assaults on the items as they are brought forward, progress necessarily will be retarded longer than usual.

Bringing up the bill under the five-minute rule will afford the first opportunity in more than half a century to test the working of a three party house organization, the new Progressives being entitled to minority recognition for offering amendments to the pending measure. It being the determination of the majority to hasten the passage of the tariff bill, any attempt to filibuster will be checked by special rule, if necessary.

Majority Leader Underwood is inclined to suppress efforts of anxious Democrats to bring in a special rule limiting amendments. He has announced that he does not wish to resort to any such drastic measure, but has further declared that the country is entitled to the new tariff law as soon as it possibly can be enacted and that undue delay will not be tolerated. This being the attitude of the majority leaders, the bill is expected to pass the house before May 10.

Democratic opposition to the bill on account of the free raw wool and free sugar in three years is not now expected to develop much strength in the house, though a few Democrats will not vote for the bill, having been released from the pledge binding them to the party measure in caucus. The Republican minority will have amendments to every paragraph of the wool schedule and the sugar schedule. The Progressives also will have many amendments to all schedules and both minorities will present amendments to the administrative features of the bill. Amendments that would change the exemption in the income tax and its administrative features also are to be offered.

While the house is at work the senate finance committee will continue consideration of the measure. This committee now is being deluged with appeals from manufacturers and other interests all over the country for public hearings on the bill. Every influence that possibly can be controlled is being exerted to induce the Democratic senators to grant hearings. Thus far they have withstood all appeals but the demand is so insistent and widespread that it is possible they may yield. Should they do so consideration of the bill by the senate would be delayed.

In the senate this week the sundry civil appropriation bill, repassed by the house, will come up. This measure, vetoed by former President Taft because it prohibited the use of funds allotted the department of justice for prosecution of farmers or labor organizations for violation of the Sherman law, will meet with some resistance. As it passed the house after consultation with President Wilson the opposition in the senate is not expected to be effective.

STRICKEN BLIND ON ROOF

Atlantic City, N. J., April 28.—Stricken blind while employed on the roof of a house at 1915 Hummock avenue, Ernest Talliaferro, a painter, pitched forward into the street thirty feet below, and his companions expected to find him fatally injured.

When the ambulance arrived, however, he was easily revived and was found to have escaped serious injury. Refusing all assistance after he had been given medical aid, Talliaferro painfully made his way to his home, a short distance away. A recurrence of eye trouble caused the accident.

ATTEMPT TO DUCK BRITISH MILITANTS

London Mob Hauls Suffragette Wagon to Lake.

London, April 28.—Hyde Park was again turned into a Beldam by the suffragettes and their opponents Sunday afternoon.

The women, declining to recognize the police order that no suffragette meetings were to be held in the park, appeared with a wagonette and proceeded to address a small crowd.

Immediately youths commenced to gather, and an attempt was made to drag the wagonette to the Serpentine for the purpose of ducking the women.

Mounted and foot police intervened just in time to save them and the suffragettes were escorted from the park followed by a jeering crowd, who pelted them with turf and street refuse as they entered a cab.

Men supporters of the cause were similarly treated, the crowd refusing to allow any suffrage meeting, militant or otherwise.

The Perthshire cricket pavilion, at Perth, together with a collection of valuable photographs, records and relics, was destroyed by fire. Suffragettes are suspected, although nothing of an incriminating nature has been found.

WON'T GIVE UP MURDERER

Captain of British Steamer Says He Has No Right to Surrender Man.

Philadelphia, April 28.—Captain Meadus, of the British steamship Merion, refused to surrender an employe on that vessel, who is wanted by the police of this city on suspicion of murder.

The Merion was caught by wireless at the Breakwater en route for England and halted on her voyage to sea until the captain decided what to do in the matter.

The commander had been asked to surrender an oiler in the engine room who is suspected of having killed Assistant Engineer Lindsay, whose body was recovered from the dock after the liner had pulled out. The man had been stabbed through the heart.

The captain studied up the phases of the international law and decided that as the man wanted was a British subject he had no right to surrender him on the high seas, and that if he was wanted the proper place to get him was in England.

SAYS STEEL MEN RUINED HIM

Coatesville Publisher Declares He Was Boycotted.

TESTIFIED AGAINST TRUST

He Exposed Pool Agreement In Steel Trade Before Congressional Committee.

Washington, April 28.—Steel trust interests have got their vengeance on one of the witnesses against them by driving him into bankruptcy, so it is alleged in a complaint filed with Representative A. O. Stanley by S. B. Kaufman, for many years the publisher and owner of the Daily Union, at Coatesville, Pa.

Kaufman says he is the victim in question, his paper having just been sold by the sheriff.

His business troubles, he adds, bear out the prediction he made to Representative Stanley on July 24, 1911, that the testimony he was then giving, not of his own suggestion or volition, against the steel plate pool of 1900-1906 would result sooner or later in his financial ruin.

Kaufman is the man who furnished to Chairman Stanley, of the house committee investigating the steel trust, a copy of what was alleged to be the original pooling agreement of the "Steel Plate Association of the United States."

The agreement was dated Nov. 9, 1900, and included the Carnegie Steel company, Jones & Laughlin, the Illinois Steel company, the Crucible Steel company of America, the Otis Steel company, the Tidewater Steel company, the Lukens Iron and Steel company, the Central Iron and Steel company, the American Steel and Wire company and the Glasgow Iron company.

The constituent companies apportioned among themselves all shipments of steel plates. The steel company that dared violate the agreement held itself liable to heavy penalties, and it was said that $1000 fines frequently were imposed on members of the combination when complaints were filed with the executive committee.

J. R. Van Ormer, sales agent of the Lukens Iron and Steel company, testified before the Stanley committee that when it was discovered that the pooling agreement was illegal the printed copies were called in and burned.

"The plan was nipped in the bud," testified Van Ormer, "but the agreement was lived up to in practice for nearly six years, and the prices for steel plate were the highest in the history of the industry."

Kaufman testified before the Stanley committee that he was employed to put the pool agreement into type at his printing office, and that shortly after he had delivered the printed copies to President Huston, of the Lukens Iron and Steel company, Van Ormer came to the Kaufman shop to see if there were any other copies of the agreement lying around loose.

Kaufman now alleges in his written complaint to Representative Stanley that his paper has been up against a boycott in Coatesville ever since he testified before the steel trust investigating committee to congress two years ago.

The Lukens Iron and Steel company and the Worth Brothers company are situated at Coatesville. A. F. Huston, president of the Lukens Iron and Steel company, is also president of the Coatesville Trust company. William Gibbons, who was president of the Chester Valley bank, is connected with the Huston interests. W. P. Worth, of the Worth Brothers company, is president of the National Bank of Coatesville.

Kaufman says that his paper was virtually boycotted by the Huston, Worth and Gibbons interests. The three banks took out their advertisements, which had been running regularly, and put them in the rival paper, the Record.

Mercantile concerns told Kaufman they would have to quit him or run the risk of losing the trade of mill operatives controlled by the steel and iron plants.

SAW EVIDENCE OF SEA TRAGEDY

Empty Raft and Floating Body Sighted by Steamer.

Philadelphia, April 28.—Mute evidence of another tragedy of the sea was discovered by the officers and crew of the German steamship Euphemis, which arrived in port.

Captain Jordt reported that on April 13 he had sighted in latitude 36.22, longitude 74.21, an empty raft and the following day the body of a drowned seaman.

That the raft had been improvised by the crew that had perished was evident from the fact that it bore a stake ten feet high that had been used to attract the attention of passing vessels. Other articles of ship furniture and woodwork were scattered about for quite a distance.

The Euphemis' crew are of the opinion that the disaster was probably that of a schooner that had been run down by a larger vessel or else had lost its way in some of the recent storms that have been raging across the Atlantic. The body of the seaman was wrapped in a shroud and given a sailor's burial.

Pottsville, Pa., April 28.—Lighting a match on the fifth level of the Holmgangway of the Lytle colliery, near here, Frank and Joseph Marks, brothers, who were lost, ignited gas. There was an explosion and they were seriously burned, besides inhaling the flames.

A large wholesale drug firm is named as the purchaser.

It was stated at Dr. Friedmann's hotel apartments that all the plans had been made for the distribution of the vaccine, but that the contract has not yet been signed. All the details, it was announced, would be given out by Dr. Friedmann very soon.

BOY BANDIT SCARED, TOO

Holds Up Boss With Payroll Cash, Then Runs Like Mad.

Lancaster, Pa., April 28.—Arthur G. Lehman, of the Penn Swing and Ladder company, was held up in an alley near the plant by William Bradel, a seventeen-year-old employe, who was masked.

Lehman was returning from the bank with $350 to pay the hands when he was confronted by Bradel with a revolver.

Lehman in his fright dropped the money, and Bradel, equally scared, dropped his mask, and when he saw he was recognized made no effort to get any of the money, but ran away. He was caught after a chase and sent to prison.

$24,000,000 For Good Roads.

Washington, April 28.—A bill to create a bureau of public highways in the department of agriculture was introduced by Representative Campbell, of Kansas. An appropriation of $24,000,000, to be used in co-operative work among the states in proportion to population, was proposed.

His nomination, according to present plans, it was said, would go to the senate this week. No one has been determined upon as yet for governor general of the Philippines.

WAR TRAINING OF ARMY IS URGED

Secretary Would Assemble Division as School.

TOO MANY ARMY POSTS

Mr. Garrison Declares Troops Are Too Widely Scattered and Would Concentrate Them Into a Few Large Posts.

Washington, April 28.—In a statement Secretary Garrison, pointing to the American army scattered in small units throughout the country, impossible of coalescence for practical instruction in the larger tactical measures of battle, urged the importance of assembling brigades and divisions periodically and temporarily in times of peace for war training, pending the adoption of a government policy for the adequate distribution of the army.

Epitomizing his idea, Secretary Garrison said:

"I hope that war may never come, but in the present stage of civilization we must recognize the possibility, and it is with this idea in mind that I say I believe it would be well for the country if our legislators would make provisions for the annual assembling of at least one division, as a school wherein our officers might be given that practical training which is so necessary to develop educated generals and staff officers."

"We may not need a large army, but it should be one which in organization and training is as nearly perfect as it is possible to make it. Otherwise, whatever is spent is not bringing its full efficient return; and this applies to thought, skill and training as well as to money."

Discussing the question of a future military policy for the United States, Secretary Garrison said it seemed to be agreed there were entirely too many army posts at the present time and that many of them were not where they were useful or desirable under existing conditions.

"Whether this situation should be remedied," he continued, "by concentrating the army into a few quite large posts, or into only as many as would permit a regiment at least to be quartered in each, I have not as yet formed any definite conclusion in my own mind. Much may be said effectively upon each side of this question. I hope when I get the time to give this matter my most earnest consideration, with a desire to reach a conclusion which is best for the army, which, of course, will be that which is best for the country."

Irrespective of the purpose of the temporary concentration of the present division in Texas under command of Major General William H. Carter and considered only as a school, the secretary said the expense "will be more than repaid in the practical training received by officers on whose shoulders will rest the responsibility for the lives of our soldiers in camp and their conduct in the field."

"No better illustration of the value of divisional organization and training can be given," he added, "than I compare the prompt and easy concentration of the present division in Texas with the cumbersome and slow assembling under the old organization of the provisional division sent to San Antonio two years ago."

Charged With Cutting Girl's Hair.

Long Branch, N. J., April 28.—William E. Bennett is in the city jail under $1000 bail for a hearing, charged by Miss Ella Hennessy with entering her home and cutting off part of her hair. There is considerable mystery about the affair, as young Bennett denies having been in Miss Hennessy's home and declares he is being made a scapegoat.

OLD AGE DEFERRED
Echo From the Medico-Legal Society.
A few generations back a man at 50 was considered old, gray-bearded, and waiting for death. Note the change today; at a meeting of the Medico-Legal society it was stated that a man of 50 ought to have forty good years ahead of him and, thus at ninety be in the fulness of maturity.

What if you have seen sixty, or even seventy birthdays—temperate habits, fresh air and exercise, with a simple diet and a sufficient amount of sleep will guard your health.

If perchance, your circulation is poor, if you become run down—weak and no appetite—nothing in the world will tone up those tired back-sliding organs—enrich the blood and create strength so quickly as our delicious cod liver and iron tonic Vinol.

THE WEEK'S WEATHER

Moderately Cool Weather for Early Part of the Week.

Moderately cool weather will prevail the greater part of the week in the Northwestern States and early in the week throughout the North Central and Eastern States, with temperatures averaging near normal throughout the South and Southwest, according to the Weather Bureau's weekly bulletin.

"Frosts are probable Monday and Tuesday in the region of the Great Lakes and the Ohio Valley and Tuesday and Wednesday in the North Atlantic States", the bulletin said.

"The precipitation during the week will be generally below normal. A disturbance of moderate intensity that is now on the Northwest will move slowly eastward, crossing the great Central Valleys about Thursday and the Eastern States near the end of the week. It will be preceded by warmer weather and local showers and thunderstorms and be followed by colder weather over the northern half of the country.

"Another disturbance will appear in the Far West about Thursday and prevail over the Middle West at the close of the week."

IN THE REALM OF FASHION

Charming Waist.

Taking into consideration the extreme youth of the year, fashions are crystallizing very nicely. Probably this is due in a large measure to the decisive novelty of the principal themes, as, for example, the little coat of broche, the square shaped decolette, the medics and medieval styles of lace collars, together with the instant Bulgarian embroidery. Although chiefly exploited in wool, the orthodox medium, this broche is also being expressed in a coarse sort of vegetable silk, which is more happily mated to such materials as crepons. The graceful blouse illustrated is carried out in a fine white crepon. The supplied fronts are very new; also the square collar and cuffs, with their touches of Bulgarian embroidery.

BANKER TO FACE HOUSE FIRE

Committee Charges Him With Contempt For Hitting Member.

Washington, April 28.—The special house committee which investigated the assault by Charles C. Glover, a Washington banker, on Representative Sims, of Tennessee, reported it had found Glover in contempt of the house and recommended that the speaker issue a warrant for his arrest to answer that charge.

Chairman Davis, of West Virginia, said he would call it up for action as soon as the house had disposed of the tariff bill.

Big Blast Heard For Miles.

Amsterdam, N. Y., April 28.—Something like two tons of dynamite was used in a blast which was touched off at the quarry of the Valley Stone company, at Granville, a few miles east of this city. The report could be heard for many miles up and down the Mohawk valley. It is estimated that 80,000 cubic yards of stone were pried loose from the solid mass.

Flyer Scrambles Many Eggs.

Lewistown, Pa., April 28.—Running perhaps sixty miles an hour, the Pennsylvania twenty-hour Chicago special struck a handcar near here and smashed into decorative particles an immense basket of eggs thereon. Engine, cab, tender and train were all streaked with yellow.

Beating the Name

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

When Jeremiah Stubbs of a certain New England village insisted on naming his mouth-old baby boy Hezekiah Pontius Stubbs his wife wailed out: "Why, you've tied a millstone around his neck at the start!"

So he had. The baby had to fight whooping cough, measles, colic, rash and other things, while all others in the village escaped scot free.

Before H. P. S. was twelve years old he had fallen from a tree, narrowly escaped drowning, got hooked by a cow, spent two hours in a well and had been blown up with gunpowder.

One day, at the age of thirty-six, he was the attorney for the defense in a case of hog stealing. He felt that he could win hands down, but he was smashed all to bits and his client sent to jail. An hour later the deponent lawyer was seated in his little dog hole of an office when a stranger entered. He had been a spectator in the courtroom.

"You ought to go to jail in place of your client," said the stranger as he took the only other chair in the room. "Durned if I hadn't!" was the admission.

"What's the matter with you?"

"My name."

"I believe it's Stubbs?"

"It's worse than that. It's Hezekiah Pontius Stubbs!"

"Good lands! Then you've always been a failure?"

"From babyhood up. I've tried being a schoolmaster, a writing master, a dry goods clerk, a bookkeeper, a subscription book agent, a tin peddler and a lawyer—a failure in each case."

"The name may or may not be against you, but you haven't hit the right road yet. Perhaps I can help you. I am a piano manufacturer in Boston. I made up 500 cheap pianos last year, to find they wouldn't sell. They are good at the price, but they are square pianos, and the people want uprights. I'm going to give you a problem to solve."

"Shoot 'er off."

"It's what is the best way to get rid of those instruments. Solve that for me and I'll solve your future. I'll call tomorrow afternoon. Good day."

H. P. S. had seen no more than half a dozen pianos in his life. He had never done business. He had simply bought a dollar's worth at a time and seldom had anything to sell.

Five hundred pianos at $200 each! Whew!

The failure sat up all night and thought and figured and figured. He was ready next day when the Boston man called with his:

"Well, how did you make out?"

"I will show you," was answered as three or four pages of legal cap were produced.

"Firstly, not one farmer in fifty has a piano in his house."

"Secondly, not one farmer in 100 has seen an upright piano."

"Thirdly, the farmer looks for something cheap."

"Fourthly, he wants time to pay for it, even if he has the cash in the house."

"Fifthly, 95 per cent of them are honest."

"Sixthly, they must be approached in a certain way."

"Seventhly, not one farmer in fifty will drive to town to visit a music store."

"Eighthly, a piano must be stood in his parlor and allowed to appeal to eye and ear."

"Ninthly, one farmer will buy a thing because another has."

"Tenthly, I am to start out at your expense and secure the name of every farmer in this county who has one or more daughters."

"Eleventhly, when I have secured the names you are to ship me 100 pianos and furnish me a rig to drive them from door to door."

"Twelfthly, the terms are to be $200 each—$25 down and two years to pay the balance."

"I guess that's about all," said the lawyer as he leaned back.

"Hezekiah Pontius Stubbs, draw up an agreement!" said the piano man as he reached out his hand for a shake.

Two weeks later H. P. S. was looking up names of farmers with daughters and young farmers that had married within a year or two.

Another fortnight and he was driving over the same road with three pianos on his fancy wagon and saying to farmers:

"Oh, by the way, I want to store one of these pianos in your parlor for a month. I'm not asking you to buy nor rent, but just to let it sit there."

"But I don't buy, remember," the farmer would caution.

"Oh, no, no. In fact, I couldn't sell it to you. It's for a man on the Red Bridge road. It's just a case of doing me a favor."

And do you think that piano ever went out of the house? And don't you know that Farmer Jones bought one because Farmer Green did? And wasn't the Brown girl just as good as the White girl?

The 500 pianos were sold in two counties. Then a thousand more were sold. Then H. P. S. sold uprights, sheet music, guitars, harps and banjos, and today he runs three music stores and is worth looking up in the commercial agencies.

Hezekiah Pontius Stubbs has made good. He stood up fair against the name and beat it.

A Swineherd's Method of Raising Thrifty Chester Whites.

My plan in taking care of my Chester White hogs is to keep my brood sows in just as thrifty a condition as possible at all times, writes F. Little in Orange Judd Farmer. In fact, I strive to do this with all classes of swine. I sort the hogs as to size and age and keep them in small pasture lots. I let them run out all the time as I am a great believer in hogs having plenty of exercise. They must have this to do well. I also plan to feed them a variety of stuff and to feed regularly, believing that their stomachs need attention just as well as those of human beings.

My breeding sows are kept in a yard by themselves. I do not shut them up until farrowing time approaches. Sometimes I keep them in a pen a day or two beforehand, but I very frequently permit them to run out with the other sows. I am convinced that the sow should be shut up by herself and fed alone some time before and some days after farrowing.

After the pigs come the sow should not be fed very much for a few days else the pigs will scour and some of them may die. After two or three days the sow should have her feed the same as before farrowing. Provide plenty of room for exercise at all times for the sow as well as the pigs.

When the pigs are a month or so old they will eat a little corn and a little swill. After the pigs are eight weeks old I wean them. The sow will then not be giving much milk, and the pigs will do better if shut off by themselves and properly fed. Give these weanling pigs a warm place to sleep in, plenty of water at all times, good feed, and you will be surprised to see how fast they grow. Started in this way they will weigh fifty pounds at two months old and at three months they will weigh from seventy to ninety pounds.

A Missouri farmer gives in a recent issue of Breeder's Gazette an account of his Chester White sow. Her first four litters totaled forty-four pigs, eleven in each litter, and all were raised. Her fifth litter had eight, all of which were raised. Her sixth litter had fourteen; eleven raised. Her seventh litter had sixteen; nine raised. Her eighth litter, last March, had sixteen; all chilled. Her ninth litter had seven; six raised. She has recently farrowed fourteen pigs, eleven of which are living. She never was bred but once for a litter and has farrowed only one dead pig. The Chester White sow shown is an excellent specimen of this fine breed of hogs.

At four months old I have had pigs weigh 128 pounds and at five months 200 pounds. This fall one of my seven month pigs weighed 270 pounds and was good enough to take the blue ribbon in a class of forty four at the Illinois state fair.

I keep my herd hogs by themselves and feed them well. I want to say further concerning feeding my sows that a 250 pound sow will take care of twelve quarts of good swill three times a day and three ears of corn.

I try to provide swine pasture as fully as I can. I have red clover and timothy. Clover, of course, is the very best feed we can get in this country. I use a standard dip and either dip or spray my hogs every sixty days.

The Season for Ice Is Now Here

The Gettysburg Ice & Storage Company will sell Ice this summer at the same price, thirty cents per hundred pounds, retail, as in former years.

The impression has become somewhat general that on account of the shortage of natural ice harvested this winter, and because of the large crowds expected during the summer months the Gettysburg Ice & Storage Company would increase the price of their product. This impression is entirely erroneous. It is the policy of the company not to take an advantage of this nature.

Their purpose is to merit the patronage and confidence of the public by fair, open treatment and by maintaining the quality of their products.
